I took the lens out of my Canon Rebel XTi and held it up to my Sony Alpha a65 and saw that there is a noticeable difference (as I figured it would be). I have posted pictures of my body up in the 4th post. I know that I could make my images look better by using the "tuning" and "color" options but I am just wondering if the 24-105mm is better in person than on the camera. Just to put some context to the question, I have shot macro and landscapes before and it works great! The only problem is that my landscapes are all in color. I have not shot in color for a while and it kind of looks weird since I am more used to shooting landscapes in black and white. Thanks in advance for
