Matters (2015 film) Family Matters is a 2015 American comedy-drama film written by Stephen Merchant and directed by Brian Robbins. The film stars Steve Carell, Toni Collette, John Krasinski, Maya Rudolph, Alison Brie, Kimmy Robertson, Mae Whitman, John Corbett, and Paul Rudd. The film is about a family who are facing a potential financial disaster when the father's company is sold and he and his family must move in with his parents-in-law. The film was released on September 24, 2015, by Paramount Pictures. Plot Jonah King, a corporate lawyer, is offered the CEO position at his father's law firm, after his father retires. Jonah's wife Hannah, daughter Max and son Theo accept the offer and move to the suburbs, where they will be closer to Jonah's parents. After a brief period, Jonah is offered the CEO position at his father's firm and, feeling proud of himself, the King family buys a large house in the suburbs for a price that they can't afford. Jonah starts a podcast, where he and a producer with a miserable track record and little talent, talk about their lives. His parents-in-law, Lois and Bill, are supportive of the podcast, but it's not really successful. 82157476af
